La historia de Juan Diego

En abril de 1990, Juan Diego fue beatificado por el papa Juan Pablo II en el Vaticano. Al siguiente mes, en la Basílica de Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe en la ciudad de México, durante su Segunda visita al Santuario, Su Santidad presidió la solemne ceremonia de beatificación.

En julio 2002 fue canonizado en una ceremonia presidida por Juan Pablo II, realizada en la Basílica de Guadalupe.

¿Quién era este Juan Diego?

La mayoría de los estudiosos concuerdan que Juan Diego nació en 1474 en el calpulli de Tlayacac en Cuauhtitlán, et que fue establecido en 1168 por la tribu nahua y posteriormente conquistado por el jefe Azteca Axayacatl en 1467; y estaba localizado 20 kilómetros al norte de Tenochtitlán (ciudad de México, D.F.).

Su nombre de nacimiento fue Cuauhtlatotzin, que podría ser traducido como «el que habla como águila» o «águila que habla».

El Nican Mopohua lo describe como un «macehualli», o «pobre indio», es decir uno que no pertenecía a ninguna de las categorías sociales del Imperio, como funcionarios, sacerdotes, guerreros, mercaderes, etc., es decir que pertenecía a la mas numerosa y baja clase del Imperio Azteca, pero no a la clase de los esclavos. Hablándole a Nuestra Señora él se describe como «un hombrecillo» o un don nadie, y atribuye a ésto su falta de credibilidad ante el Obispo.

El trabajaba duramente la tierra y fabricaba matas las que luego vendía. Era dueño de su pedazo de tierra y tenía una pequeña vivienda en ella. Estaba casado pero no tenía hijos.

En los años 1524 o 1525 se produce su conversión al cristianismo y fue bautizado, así como su esposa, recibiendo el nombre cristiano de Juan Diego y su esposa el nombre de María Lucía. Fueron quizás bautizados por el misionero franciscano Fray Toribio de Benavente, llamado por los indios «Motolinía» o «el pobre» por su extrema gentileza y piedad y las ropas raídas que vestía.

De acuerdo a la primera investigación formal realizada por la Iglesia sobre los sucesos, las Informaciones Guadalupanas de 1666, Juan Diego parece haber sido un hombre muy devoto y religioso, aún antes de su conversión. Era muy reservado y de un místico

In Honor of the Virgin of Guadalupe

“I am ordained to serve” is the motto of SS. Peter & Paul Deacon Salvador Sánchez

By Alan Abrams
La Prensa Senior

Salvador Sánchez is as familiar a face at services at Toledo's SS. Peter & Paul's Church as that of Father Richard Notter. And he should be—this year Sánchez celebrates his 20th year as a Deacon of the church.

“I was ordained in 1982,” Sánchez told La Prensa in a telephone interview last week. “I was originally a member of the parish before one of the priests, Father Dave Beck, talked to me about my becoming a deacon. Father Clancy Yager was also very supportive in my decision.”

Sánchez first came to Milwaukee from his native

The dialogue about immigration stills

*Commentary by Antonio Meza Estrada

Two years ago, México and the United States were on the verge of a new era in the bilateral relationship.

Presidents Bush and Fox had assumed office with a powerful new vision of how our two countries could work together, not just in trade and investment, but across a wide spectrum of issues. Both leaders not only envisioned a new era of productive bilateral cooperation, but actively set to work to make it happen.

Unfortunately, the brutal attacks of September 11 caused this vision to be pushed aside as the United States focused its energy on mobilizing against terrorism. Now, as that conflict appears set to enter a new chapter, it is time to renew our bilateral efforts. Indeed, it is exactly the continuing threat of terrorism that demands that the United States and México define new ways to work together for our common security.

Security starts at home. And nothing is closer to home than the 2,000 mile U.S.-Mexican border, which ought to be a source of security and prosperity, instead of a source of bilateral irritation and potential risk.

More than one million people cross the border every day—for tourism, commerce, and work. Most of these crossings are legal, but too many are not. Hard working Mexicans come north to meet the demands of U.S. companies that cannot otherwise find enough workers.

The result is a Mexican diaspora with workers that live, work, raise families, pay taxes, and contribute to their communities in this country, but do so largely under the radar screen of U.S. immigration authorities.

It is profoundly in México's interest, as much as that of the United States, that this situation be legalized.

A decade ago, our two countries entered into a trade and investment agreement—the North American Free Trade Agreement, which was designed to promote both countries' increasing prosperity. By any economic measure—bilateral trade, jobs created, economic value produced—NAFTA has been an outstanding success.

However, as our two Presidents recognized early last year, the bilateral agenda will remain incomplete until we address the "people issues" with as much imagination and political will as we have devoted to the trade issues.

There are many reasons why we need to move ahead on a robust, bilateral agenda that includes: smart border arrangements, a new framework to manage the flow of people between the United States and México, bilateral infrastructure products, drug trafficking, and other key political and economic issues.

However, in the current global context none is more immediately compelling than security.

We live in a perilous world and are confronted by a common terrorist threat. When scores of Mexicans died in the September 11 attacks, alongside thousands of other innocent people, the terrorists effectively declared that they recognize no nationalities.

Our governments have worked together on hunting the hidden sources of terrorist financing, on strengthening border security, and on disarming Iraq by harnessing the authority of the international community through a consensus resolution in the UN Security Council.

These are important initiatives, but we need more. Now, both countries need an even safer, more secure, and efficient border. Both countries need to assure that the rights of their citizens are protected when they travel, live, and work abroad. And both countries need to demonstrate that they remain committed to advancing security and prosperity in the Americas through creative, bilateral arrangements.

The question is how to proceed. Closing the border is not a viable, or practical, solution because of our ever increasing and increasingly productive interdependence. However, regularizing the status of Mexican workers within a new migration framework would allow U.S. authorities to know exactly who is in the United States, leaving less room for terrorists to hide. It would protect the rights of Mexicans in this country, and it would eliminate the corrosive effects of an underground economy that is essentially driven by the ebb and flow of labor markets on both sides of the border.

This approach is not only compatible with a security driven agenda, it is essential to it. Indeed, such an agreement would be in the spirit of Homeland Security Advisor Tom Ridge's call for new border arrangements that can simultaneously defend against terrorism and narco-trafficking, while promoting healthy, mutually beneficial cross-border economic activity.

This would be an aggressive agenda at any time. Border and migration issues are always intensely political. But, with the U.S. mid term elections over, we have a new window of opportunity to renew the efforts begun by Presidents Bush and Fox long before September 11. The U.S.-México Binational Commission, which meets on an annual basis and which brings together eight Cabinet-level officials from both countries—headed by Secretary of State Powell and Foreign Secretary Castañeda—can allow us to renew those efforts.

We must not miss this chance.

Letter to the Editor

Latinos meet with Democratic Party Leadership

Strong candidates, support from the Latino community, and the backing of the Lucas County Democratic Party have made Toledo's political complexion more inclusive than ever before. We can proudly list a growing number of elected officials—from Juvenile Court Judge Joseph Flores, Councilman Louis Escobar, and Washington School Board member Lisa Canales-Flores to recently elected Toledo School Board member Anita López.

For approximately two hours on the night of December 11th, involvement, recruitment and identification of candidates for elected offices were the topics of conversation among sixteen members of the Latino community at the Lucas County Democratic Headquarters.

Attendees were: Connie Eason, Louis Escobar, Cynthia Geronimo, M. Pacheco, Mary Ward, Lucy Weaver, Lourdes Santiago, Denise Alvarado-Haack, Olga Vallejo, Phillip Vallejo, Lisa Canales-Flores, Anita López, Jesus Salas, Arturo Quintero, Alvina Costilla, and Joe Balderas. Judge Joseph Flores was attending a legal conference and sent his regrets and support.

Chaired by Councilman Escobar and Connie Treviño Eason [a community activist and co-founder of the Democratic Latina Caucus], Paula Ross, Executive Director of the Lucas County Democratic Party, offered insight to the workings of the "Party Machine."

Ms. Ross encouraged the Latino community to get involved at all levels of the organization. Ms. Ross also praised many who have worked with the Party in the past and emphasized that there is a role for everyone: working on campaigns and the cadre of opportunities and challenges this offers, taking leadership roles as precinct chairs, running for elected office, and much more.

Councilman Escobar encouraged younger people to get involved and stressed the importance of Latino visibility at all levels of the Democratic Party. He stated, "We need to be seen and make our presence known not only when a Latino candidate is running for office, but also when non-Latinos, that share our concerns and interests, are candidates for office."

Connie Eason, Anita López, and Lisa Canales-Flores shared historical information and offered first-hand knowledge of the importance of an organized group that continuously functions and participates in the inter-workings of the Democratic Party.

Mayor Jack Ford addressed the group and offered his support and congratulated the Latino community on our many political successes. "Money is at the core of any political campaign," said Mayor Ford. He recommended a process for the group to follow in raising and distributing funds to candidates that champion our interests and concerns.

Questions posed to and by the group regarding the Democratic Party were: Who are we grooming as future Latino leaders? How can we reach out to other Latinos? What will it take to get more Latino youth involved? Discussions will continue and an immediate goal of the group is to recruit more Latinos.

All are invited to the next Latino Democratic group meeting scheduled on Saturday, January 11, 2003, at 10:00 a.m., at the Lucas County Democratic Party Headquarters, 1817 Madison Avenue. Make your voice heard. Questions? Contact the Lucas County Democratic Party Headquarters at 419. 246.9301.

Study finds more Latino immigrants graduating from high school though disparity persists

By GENARO C. ARMAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP): Many more Latino immigrants are completing high school and earning college degrees, but the education gap with native-born Americans remains wide, a Latino research group reported Wednesday.

Education levels also vary by the country from which a Latino immigrant came, according to the report by the Pew Latino Center. Those from México and Central American countries like El Salvador and Honduras were less likely to finish high school than new arrivals from South America and the Caribbean.

The gap with U.S.-born residents persists in part because many Latino families cannot afford rising college costs, experts said. In other families, kids may not attend school regularly to work, while undocumented students find it hard to get financial aid.

Meanwhile, disparities may exist between sub-groups simply because of how far one has to travel to the United States, said one of the report's authors, B. Lindsay Lowell. For instance, undocumented immigrants from Mexico tend to be less edu-

Dora and Salvador Sánchez awaiting la Navidad

SS. Peter & Paul Deacon Salvador Sánchez

Mexico City in Jan. 1967 when he was 27. Now 62—his birthday falls on Christmas Day—he recalls that “there were people I knew in Milwaukee who helped me come over here.

“I came to the United States by myself. I found a lady in Milwaukee and I got married to her,” said Sánchez.

In 1969, Sánchez moved to Toledo and in 1972 he began his 30-year affiliation with Harold Jaffe Jewelers. “I do everything there,” he explains. “I am a jeweler. I set stones. I make rings. I do repairs. I am what they call a craftsman.”

But there’s even more to Sánchez’s accomplishments. “I initiated the Spanish soccer league here in Toledo,” he says. He began playing in 1970 with a German team. That’s because “Back then, there were very few Latin people playing on other teams.

“We used to play at the Schneider Soccer Field, at Bay View Park and at Pearson Park,” recalls Sánchez. “Before Schneider gave the park to the city, the Toledo District Soccer Club used to only have three fields to play on.”

Sánchez retired from active play three years ago. He had been playing with the Oldtimers, a Latin team from the Latin club.

“I am still a member of the board of the Latin Soccer League,” said Sánchez, who began playing soccer in México City when he was 13.

“I love sports and people. I’ve served with a lot of people. Playing and joking with the younger guys was always fun. They made me feel young,” he added.

Sánchez and Dora, the lady he met in Milwaukee and married, have seven children, 12 grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren.

Their children are Ricardo, who is 42 and recently retired after 21 years in the United States Air Force. He lives in Arizona.

Diane, 40, also lives in Arizona.

Robert, who is 39, lives in Toledo.

Inez, 37, lives in La Feria,

Texas, which is near Harlingen.

Pedro, who is 35, lives in Toledo, as do twins Sharon and Shirley, who are 31.

Sánchez first met Father Notter when he started studying for the ministry.

“He was one of my teachers,” said Sánchez, who spent three years in his studies for his calling. In addition, he took two years of continuing education before he was ordained. He studied theology at the Franciscan College in Sylvania. Were there many Latinos among his peers? “There were 11 Spanish deacons,” he recalls.

Dora Sánchez participated in his studies for three years. “It is part of the agreement between a wife and a husband,” he explained.

Sánchez serves as Director of the Liturgy at SS. Peter and Paul. “I am a person who enjoys being with people. A lot of people know me. I enjoy talking to people and helping people. I am here to serve,” says Sánchez.

He also works with the ministry that visits prisoners. “For eleven years, I visited Milan, and I visit Toledo. It is important to me that those who are confined have some comfort. I know it makes a difference—a lot of difference,” says Sánchez.

He adds that as a youth in Mexico, he once found himself in “a bad Environment” and understands the plight of those behind bars.

“I was ordained to serve,” said Sánchez.

And it is the parishioners of SS. Peter and Paul, as well as all those who have come into contact with Sánchez through his many activities, who have been blessed by his presence.

Immigration surge this century keeping pace with 1990s

By GENARO C. ARMAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Legal and illegal immigration surged ahead during the first 27 months of the new century, a private analysis of government data shows. Immigration experts, though, differ over the effect the slowing economy and fallout from the terrorist attacks has had on immigration the last two years.

More than 3.3 million immigrants entered the country between January 2000 and March 2002, and the nation’s foreign-born population swelled to a record 33.1 million, says a report by the Center for Immigration Studies, a research group that supports limits on immigration.

Maine is among the states with the lowest immigration figures. Maine has about 35,000 immigrants, 3,000 of whom entered between 2000 and 2002.

The report’s author, Steven Camarota, said the analysis of Census Bureau data showed no slowdown from the rapid pace of the 1990s. And, he said, it’s unlikely the economy or the attacks will change things.

“Legal and illegal immigration are largely disconnected from economic conditions in the United States because life remains far better here than in most of the immigrant-sending countries,” Camarota said.

But Claudia Smith, an immigrant advocate with the California Rural Legal Assistance Foundation in San Diego, said she believes the economy may have slowed migration.

“As long as people have to work, they keep coming,” Smith said. “If there is no work, it gets back to México in real time and people adjust their plans accordingly.”

Smith and other immigrant advocates say tougher laws that started being imposed in the 1990s have forced illegal immigrants to take greater risks to enter the country, such as crossing a desert or being smuggled in a boxcar.

The U.S. Border Patrol says apprehensions of illegal immigrants have dropped to their lowest level in more than a decade, while rescues are up.

Roberto Suro, director of the Pew Hispanic Center, cautioned against using the data as a barometer of any post-Sept. 11 immigration trends since the study stopped at March 2002, just six months after the terrorist attacks.

However, he said major events normally have only a short-term effect on immigration. Afterward, “the underlying trend reasserts itself—trends tied to economic factors and family reunification.”

Camarota estimates there are 8 million to 9 million illegal immigrants in the country, with roughly 1 million to 1.5 million entering during the first 27 months of this decade.

Of the immigrants who arrived since the beginning of 2000, about 1 million were from México.

Some evidence points to small declines in the number of student and employment visas granted to immigrants from Middle Eastern countries since Sept. 11, in large part due to crackdowns after the attacks, said Jim Zogby, president of the Arab-American Institute.

Other potential immigrants may be hesitant to come to the United States amid reports of increasing discrimination against Arab-Americans, Zogby said. The FBI said Monday that Muslims and people who are or appear to be of Middle Eastern descent were reported as victims of hate crimes more often last year than ever before.

About 88,000 people from Middle Eastern countries arrived during the period covered by Camarota’s study.

The mission statement for Camarota’s group calls for “fewer immigrants but a warmer welcome for those admitted.” According to Camarota, that could be accomplished by better policing the nation’s borders and punishing employers who hire illegals, along with maintaining stricter guidelines over who gets visas.

Honduran Congress votes to ban violent video games

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP): The Honduran Congress voted Wednesday to ban the sale and distribution of violent video games, the country's latest effort to halt growing crime and lawlessness.

The country's 128 lawmakers voted unanimously in favor of the new legislation. The president was expected to sign it into law.

The proposal includes the prohibition of Mortal Kombat, Resident Evil, Turk, the House of the Dead, Duke Nukem, Shadowman, Quake, Instant Killer, Doom, the Legacy of Kain, Street Fighter, and Perfect Dark.

The lawmakers also banned the sale of any toy that resembles a gun, knife, or other weapon.

The new legislation would take effect in June 2003, giving business officials six months to clear their shelves of the newly banned toys.

President Ricardo Maduro was elected a year ago on the promise to adopt a New York City zero-tolerance stance against crime. Since then, he has sent 8,000 soldiers and extra police into the street to maintain order.

Lisa Canales-Flores

She has also been active in the Democratic Party for other candidates over the last several years. She spearheaded the "Latinos for Jack" drive during the 2001 general election and served on the mayor's transition team.

If all goes as expected—Kapszukiewicz moves to county commissioner and his city council job opens up—Canales-Flores is confident of the mayor's support for her bid.

In fact, the mayor's office confirmed to La Prensa that if Canales-Flores has an opportunity to vie for the District 6 seat, Ford will support her.

Her next task is to line up support closer to home. Canales-Flores will be discussing her options, as those options become clearer, with husband, Stephen, and their children, Celina, Stephen, Dominick, and Angel Mia.

At this point, "it's a family decision," she said.

Three years ago, Fatima applied, with the help of an interpreter from BVR, for a position with the Catholic Diocese of Toledo. The diocese hired her even though her English skills were still extremely limited.

That has changed in the last few years. Fatima now is fluent enough in English to have become her department's primary word processor and is capable of handling anything required in the computer area. Her English is more than sufficient for telephone duties as well.

The rest of the family has also thrived, and expanded, since their arrival in the United States.

Julio works at Basilius Tool and is also attending Owens Community College. He will be transferring to the University of Toledo after this semester.

Julio, Jr., now 18, is a senior at St. Johns High School. He will be in college next year and is considering Notre Dame, Xavier [Dayton], and the University of Michigan.

Maria, 14 is an eighth-grader at Arbor Hills and Joseph, 10, attends Whiteford Elementary.

Julio speaks with awe of what Fatima has accomplished.

"It took a lot of sacrifice, dedication and effort," he says of his wife's sojourn.

Those are, evidently, words that describe the whole family.

Latino immigrants graduating from high school

cated and don't have to travel far to get to the United States.

However, those from South America typically have to pay more money to travel to the country, so they would be more likely to be more educated, or at least come from families where the cost of travel—and an education—is not as much of a hindrance.

The center's analysis of Census Bureau data between 1970 and 2000 found the share of Latino immigrants over 25 who graduated from high school increased from 28 percent to 59 percent, while for U.S.-born residents it grew from 53 percent to 87 percent.

Those immigrants who attended at least two years of college or a two-year degree doubled from 9 percent to 18 percent, while for U.S.-born citizens it increased from 17 percent to 35 percent.

Even with the disparities, "the education profile of the adult Latino immigrant population has improved significantly over the past 30 years," said the Pew center's director, Roberto Suro.

"In the coming decades, the educational composition of the Latino foreign-born population will begin to look more like that of the American native-born population," wrote Suro and co-author B.

Lindsay Lowell.

Jim Ferg-Cadima, a legislative analyst with the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund, said the report was overly optimistic. He said it did not account for factors that may limit Latino advances, including college costs or private financial aid sources, which tend to give more merit to applicants who are citizens.

Plus, forecasts are difficult to make because "this country's treatment of immigrants is always in flux," he said.

Data from the 2000 census showed the Latino population more than doubled during the 1990s to 35.3 million, rivaling blacks as the nation's largest minority group. Many Latinos from Mexico and, to a lesser extent, Central America, arrived in the past decade to take plentiful, low-skilled, low-paying jobs in factories, meatpacking plants and on farms.

The influx has strained many urban and rural schools struggling to teach new immigrants with little or no grasp of English. Some critics have called for more limits on immigration to ease the burden on schools and to reduce the number of Latino dropouts in the work force.

Government estimates place the illegal immigrant population between 8 million and 9 million, with nearly half from Mexico. About two-thirds of all undocumented immigrants have not finished high school, the report said.

Suro said he was optimistic disparities would narrow as younger foreign-born residents who tend to have more education displace in the population older residents who are less educated. In addition, more immigrant families are getting their education in the United States, where schools tend to be better than in Latin American countries.

"For the immediate and foreseeable future, substantial benefits can be reaped from programs that aim to bolster the education of immigrant youth and provide adults with language and skills training," the report said.

Krista Kafer, an education policy analyst with the conservative Heritage Foundation, said more improvement could be made by using English immersion techniques rather than bilingual education in teaching students with little or no grasp of the language.

"It doesn't seem as insurmountable a task in closing that achievement gap," she said.

Weekly Horoscope

BY SEÑORITA ANA

ARIES: (March 21-April 20)
Your financial prospects are excellent this week, especially if you join up with another to pool both your know-how and resources. It's advantageous to your monetary goals to be flexible and roll with the punches. You yearn to travel—so start planning.

TAURUS: (April 21 - May 21)
Now's the best time to start a new partnership, whether in business or romance, the results will definitely be very positive. Keep your physical energy high. Money dealings will intensify in the next few months; be very careful about the details.

GEMINI: (May 22 - June 21)
Your mind may be totally on pleasure and free time during the week, it's time to think about improving your financial and job situation. Be cautious and heed others' business suggestions. You've the capabilities to tackle any challenges thrown your way, and win.

CANCER: (June 22 - July 23)
There's a new chapter in your love life ready to be written—be patient, all the details will unfold in due time. Romance will continue to be dominant for the next several months, so enjoy it. Even if you are tempted, refrain from making any hasty decisions.

LEO: (July 24-August 23)
The thought of work doesn't do much for you, but it will be surprising just how much you will accomplish if you just put your nose to the grindstone. Keep in mind in the future that you will benefit from a more intellectual approach to moneymaking ideas and finances.

VIRGO: (August 24 - September 23)
Hard work is the key throughout this week. There is friction on the job, which can be avoided with diplomacy. The chance to enhance your working skills is good, look for opportunities, however small they may seem. The solution to a nagging problem is evident.

LIBRA: (September 24 - October 23)
This week will be a lot more active and rewarding than the past couple of weeks. Real estate could be a profitable area now. Your financial bandwagon rolls along, producing profits, which will be more evident in the next few weeks. Concentrate on doing things yourself.

SCORPIO: (October 24 - November 22)
Try to look at things with a fresh perspective. If you go about accomplishing things differently, you may be amazed at how much you'll get done. The next few weeks will favor financial planning, so work closely with someone who knows the business well.

SAGITTARIUS: (November 23 - December 21)
The prevailing theme is tranquility. Evenings may be filled with enjoyable social events and romantic interludes. You have attracted the attention of a VIP at work, someone who can help you advance your career and personal goals. Keep your attitude upbeat.

CAPRICORN: (December 22 - January 20)
Your friends are very supportive, and if you are working on a personal goal, they will be able to give some good advice. A lucky opportunity may enable you to climb up a few additional rungs on the ladder of success. Trim down your expectations to parallel with reality.

AQUARIUS: (January 21 - February 19)
You will meet a whole new circle of people who can be stimulating on an intellectual level. These new friends will help clarify any important objectives which have been fuzzy. Steer clear of any known troublemakers in the workplace; they may hamper your progress.

PISCES: (February 20 - March 20)
Distant friends or family will dominate your thoughts and actions. Start working on that special project which may have to do with a home matter. Beware of being overly optimistic concerning finances—remember to not count your chickens before they're hatched.

IF THIS WEEK IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You will no doubt achieve your greatest successes by listening to the comments and advice from others, formulating a long range program, and finding joy in your accomplishments and goals, no matter how small they may seem to you. You also have a tendency to speak before you think, hurting those close to you.

LatinoFest meets

The first planning meeting for LatinoFest 2003 was held last Saturday at the Toledo-Lucas County Library in downtown Toledo. Discussions were held concerning budget considerations, dates, entertainment, and related matters.

It was agreed that the festival for 2003 would be scheduled for Saturday, June 14th—one week before the Latino festival in Columbus.

All bands and dance groups interested in being part of this festival should contact Tony Rios, entertainment committee head, at 419-729-9915.

All vendors should contact Betty Rios or Alvina Costilla, vendor committee heads, at 419-729-9915 or 419-893-9039.

In attendance were Co-chairs Margarita DeLeón and Consuelo Hernández, Tony and Betty Rios, Arturo Quintero, Bob Salazar, Andrea Rodríguez-Ahl, and Rico Neller.

The public is invited to attend next month's meeting at the same venue on Saturday, January 18 at 10:30 a.m.

Make your reservations for New Year's Eve at the Seagate Convention Centre. CALL 419-321-5032

Argentino Ferreira único vencedor extranjero en olimpiada cubana

Por ANNE-MARIE GARCIA

LA HABANA (AP) — El boxeador argentino Matias Ferreira, de la categoría de los 60 kilos, fue el único extranjero que ganó su pelea en la primera cartelera de la llamada Olimpiada del deporte Cubano.

Ferreira venció al estadounidense Verguan Kimbrough.

“Aproveché la experiencia que tenía frente al norteamericano al que ya vencí en el último mundial de Belfast, en el 2001. Subí agresivo al ring y no le dejé tomar la iniciativa”, dijo Ferreira a la AP.

“Para mí lo más difícil será mi combate frente al cubano Mario Kindelán, número uno del orbe de la categoría. Voy a luchar con garra”, agregó el argentino, quien triunfó por 17-5.

El perdedor, Kimbrough, afirmó sentirse doblemente frustrado: “Cometí el error de quedarme demasiado pasivo y mirarme a provecho. Además estoy frustrado porque hubiera querido pelear con un cubano, a eso vine a la isla donde está el mejor boxeo amateur del mundo”, dijo.

En la misma velada, en otra pelea de los 60 kilos, Kindelán, en representación de Orientales, se impuso al Occidental Raidel Hernández, 19-6.

En la categoría 63.5 kilos, por Orientales, Diógenes Luna venció 10-1 al argentino Lucas Mathysse. En los 67 kilos, Amílcar Funes, también argentino, fue derrotado por el Oriental Yudel Johnson, 17-1.

Pero el representante de ese país más castigado fue Carlos Rodríguez, de los 81 kilos, contado en dos ocasiones frente a Johanson Martínez, perdió por decisión del árbitro.

La esperada pelea de los superpesados decepcionó a la afición. El cubano Leonardo Enrich, representante de Centrales, le ganó al estadounidense Jason Estrada por 9-6, en una pelea mediocre.

El entrenador estadounidense José Rosario se mostró desconforme con la decisión de los jueces.

“El cubano tiraba en ‘break’, no obedecía, el árbitro le hubiera debido sancionar. Vinimos aquí a competir y a pelear fuerte, si perdemos en el ring, está bien, pero no por favoritismo, notificamos nuestra inconformidad”, agregó Rosario.

Este viernes se presentará la segunda cartelera de boxeo de los Juegos Cubanos, una alternativa a los Centroamericanos y del Caribe de El Salvador, a los cuales Cubano asistió alegando falta de seguridad para su delegación.

Intervendrán dos argentinos: en los 51 kilos, Santiago Acosta frente al local Yankiel León; en los 69 kilos, Matias Ferreira frente a Mario Kindelán; mientras el gallo Ceferino Labrada, lesionado en el entrenamiento, no podrá pelear.

Además subirán al ring los estadounidenses Lamont Peterson, en los 63.5 kilos frente a Luna; en los 71 kilos, Andre Dirrell frente a Yudiel Nápoles y Aaron Alafa, en los 51 kilos, frente al local Yuriolkis Gamboa.

Lila Horton Templin died December 5, 2002

Lila Horton Templin, widow of social activist Ralph T. Templin, died December 5 in Bluffton, Ohio at the age of 104. She is the grandmother-in-law of Baldemar Velasquez, founder and president of the Farm Labor Organizing Committee (FLOC).

Lila and Ralph Templin had worked as missionaries and educators in India for 15 years. Ralph Templin's activities brought him into contact with Mahatma K. Gandhi, who taught Templin the doctrine of non-violence. Years later, it was Templin who exposed Velasquez to the Gandhian concepts. Ralph died in 1984.

“I learned non-violence at his feet,” said Velasquez of Templin. “This was back in the mid-sixties—I graduated from high school in 1965—and he turned my life around. He gave me a new outlook on life and taught me how to deal with the things that made me angry, such as the exploitation and oppression of farmworkers. He opened up an avenue for me to vent my anger...and the practice of non-violence has led me to a more significant, spiritual awakening.”

Velasquez recalled, “Butif

Ralph was the teacher. Lila was the practitioner. She taught me how to have grace under fire at times when people would rather be striking and lashing out at others.”

Lila Horton Templin was born in Malone, Iowa. When she was nine, her family moved to a farm near Arkansas City, Kansas, a half-mile from the Oklahoma border. This was the era where only two decades earlier, land-hungry pioneers began their rush into the Cherokee Strip.

Following their service in India, Lila and Ralph returned to the United States. She taught homemaking skills at the School of Living near Suffern, New York until in 1946, Arthur E. Morgan, the former president of Antioch College, summoned Templin to Yellow Springs, Ohio to work part-time for Community Service.

Lila is survived by her son Lawrence and his wife Orletta of Bluffton as well as three grandchildren: Sara Velasquez, John of Bluffton, and Mary Templin of Toledo.

Four great-grandchildren, two great-great-grandchildren, and the legacy of her life devoted to the furtherance of non-violence.

Ford asks Velasquez to head

Toledo Mayor Jack Ford has asked Baldemar Velasquez, president of FLOC, to head a committee for the purpose of renaming South Broadway Street from the High-level Bridge to at least Heritage South after César E. Chávez, who was instrumental in changing many of the harsh labor practices for migrant workers. Chávez was founder and president of the United Farm Workers.

carácter, afecto a largos silencios y frecuentes penitencias, y que solía caminar desde su poblado hasta Tenochtitlán, a 20 kilómetros de distancia, para recibir instrucción religiosa.

Su esposa María Lucía enferma y luego fallece en 1529. Juan Diego entonces se traslada a vivir con su tío Juan Bernardino en Tolpetlac, que le quedaba cerca de la iglesia en Tlatilco - Tenochtitlán, solo 14 kilómetros.

El caminaba cada sábado y domingo a la iglesia, partiendo a la mañana muy temprano, antes que amaneciera, para llegar a tiempo a la Santa Misa y a las clases de instrucción religiosa. Caminaba descalzo, como la gente de su clase macehualli, ya que solo los miembros de las clases superiores de los aztecas usaban cactilis, o sandalias, confeccionadas con fibras vegetales o de pieles. En esas frías madrugadas usaba para protegerse del frío una manta, tilma o ayate, tejida con fibras del maguey, el cactus típico de la región. El algodón era solo usado por los aztecas mas privilegiados.

Durante una de sus caminatas camino a Tenochtitlán, caminatas que solían tomar unas tres horas y medias a través de montañas y poblados, ocurre la primera aparición de Nuestra Señora, en el lugar ahora conocido como «Capilla del Cerrito», donde la Santísima Virgen le habló en su idioma, el náhuatl. Ella se refirió a él con grandísimo cariño, llamándolo «Juanito, Juan Dieguito», «el mas pequeño de mis hijos», «hijito mío».

Juan Diego tenía 57 años en el momento de las apariciones, ciertamente una edad avanzada en un lugar y época donde la expectativa de vida masculina apenas sobrepasaba los 40 años.

Luego del milagro de Guadalupe Juan Diego fue a vivir a un pequeño cuarto pegado a la capilla que alojaba la santaimagen, luego de dejar todas sus pertenencias a su tío Juan Bernardino, pasando el resto de su vida completamente dedicado a la difusión del relato de las apariciones entre la gente de su pueblo.

Juan Diego muere el 30 de mayo de 1548, a la edad de 74 años.

Juan Diego amaba de sobremanera la Sagrada Eucaristía, y por permiso especial del Obispo recibía la Comunión tres veces por semana, algo completamente inusual en aquellos tiempos.

Su Santidad Juan Pablo II alabó en Juan Diego su simple fé enriquecida por la catequesis y lo definió (a aquél que le dijo a la Santísima Virgen: «soy solo un hombrecillo, soy un cordel, soy una escalerilla de tablas, soy cola, soy hoja, soy gente menuda...») como un modelo de humildad para todos nosotros.

Lisa Canales-Flores considers possible District 6 opening

*By Fletcher Word
La Prensa Staff Writer*

Lisa Canales-Flores, assistant to the mayor of Toledo and Washington Local school board member, was not on any ballot in the recent November elections.

However, in the wake of those elections, local politicians and voters have discovered that there are now more questions than there were before the ballots were counted.

Canales-Flores may soon be in a position to throw her hat in the ring for an open District 6 seat—a seat she has long coveted.

The elective-office domino effect was started by Maggie Thurber's victory over long-time county commissioner, Sandy Isenberg, and by Peter Ujvagi's victory in the Ohio House of Representative's race.

Then, came the announcement of Bill Copeland's impending retirement from his county commissioner position.

At the front of the line for Copeland's job is Wade Kapszukiewicz, District 6 city councilman. Should he be appointed to that spot, Canales-Flores will have a decision to make about contacting the Democratic Party and asking to be considered for the position. She has already started thinking about it.

"I have always wanted to do it," she told La Prensa last week. "Absolutely, always wanted to do it. I have always made that clear."

What Canales-Flores had not counted on was the possibility of having to make a decision about the seat so soon.

"I didn't expect it to open so quickly," she said. "But, I'm definitely thinking about the opportunity."

Canales-Flores has been an assistant to Mayor Jack Ford since last April. Prior to that appointment, she had been with the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill (NAMI) for three years as that agency's media coordinator. Canales-Flores has been on the Washington Local school board for

Freedom's Sojourn

The trip from Granada, Nicaragua to Miami, Florida takes only a few hours by airplane. If you are a Nicaraguan citizen without a visa, it can take weeks.

In fact, it took Fatima Martínez 30 days just to reach the Texas border back in 1989, accompanied as she was by four-year-old, Julio, Jr. and four-month-old, Maria.

Fatima, and her husband, Julio, now Toledo residents, are both from Nicaragua. From 1979 until 1989, Nicaragua was the scene of a destructive civil war and the Martínez family decided to leave their homeland for a better life in the United States. At that time, Julio was attending college and working full time and Fatima was an assistant sales manager with a major soap manufacturer.

Julio arrived in Miami first to find housing and a job. Fatima and the two young children set out on February 28, 1989 to join Julio. On March 28, they reached Matamoros, México on the U.S. border.

Fatima found a "coyote" to guide the family into Texas and, upon arrival, located a safe house where they stayed for several days until Julio arrived from Miami and lead them on another two week trek to reach their new home. In Miami, Fatima cleaned houses and Julio worked in restaurants and on construction sites to support the family. With their limited command of English, Miami suited the family's immediate needs. They applied for, and received, political asylum in Miami.

"We liked Miami," says Fatima. "It was easy because everyone spoke Spanish." But Miami was not perfect.

"The schools were not so good and the crime rate is high," says Fatima. She and Julio heard about Toledo from friends and decided to make the move in 1997, in spite of the language difficulties they would face and the change in climate.

An additional burden was the lingering effects of Fatima's 1994 automobile accident. She was diagnosed with myofascial pain syndrome and was unable to lift over 15 pounds or engage in repetitive overhead reaching. Her injuries reduced her hand grip strength and left her with chronic pain in her right arm and shoulder and in her back.

Once in Toledo, Fatima's goal was to become an administrative assistant or bilingual secretary. Because she had been a secretary in Nicaragua, shortly after high school graduation, Fatima had certain office skills. Fatima was referred to the Ohio Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation (BVR) and counselor Graciela Keiser-Morris in 1999.

"[Fatima] had previously held jobs involving physical exertion such as assembly, production, and house and office cleaning," says Keiser. "She had transferable skills including excellent work behaviors. She already had secretarial skills from her own country but she needed to upgrade those skills."

The BVR provided medical and clerical assessments, business training including computer skills and office techniques, placement, ergonomic equipment, physical reconditioning and bilingual dictionaries.

"Mrs. Martínez was easy to work with," said Keiser-Morris. "She was a dream consumer. Fatima was responsible, highly motivated and determined to succeed."

Fatima prepared herself during her job search by working as a volunteer at the Toledo Botanical Garden and performing data entry on weekends through a local temp
